Poland

The Stolowe Mountains are a very attractive area and well maintained from a tourist point of view. The Park area is cut through by a dense network of tourist trails, whose total length is about 100 km

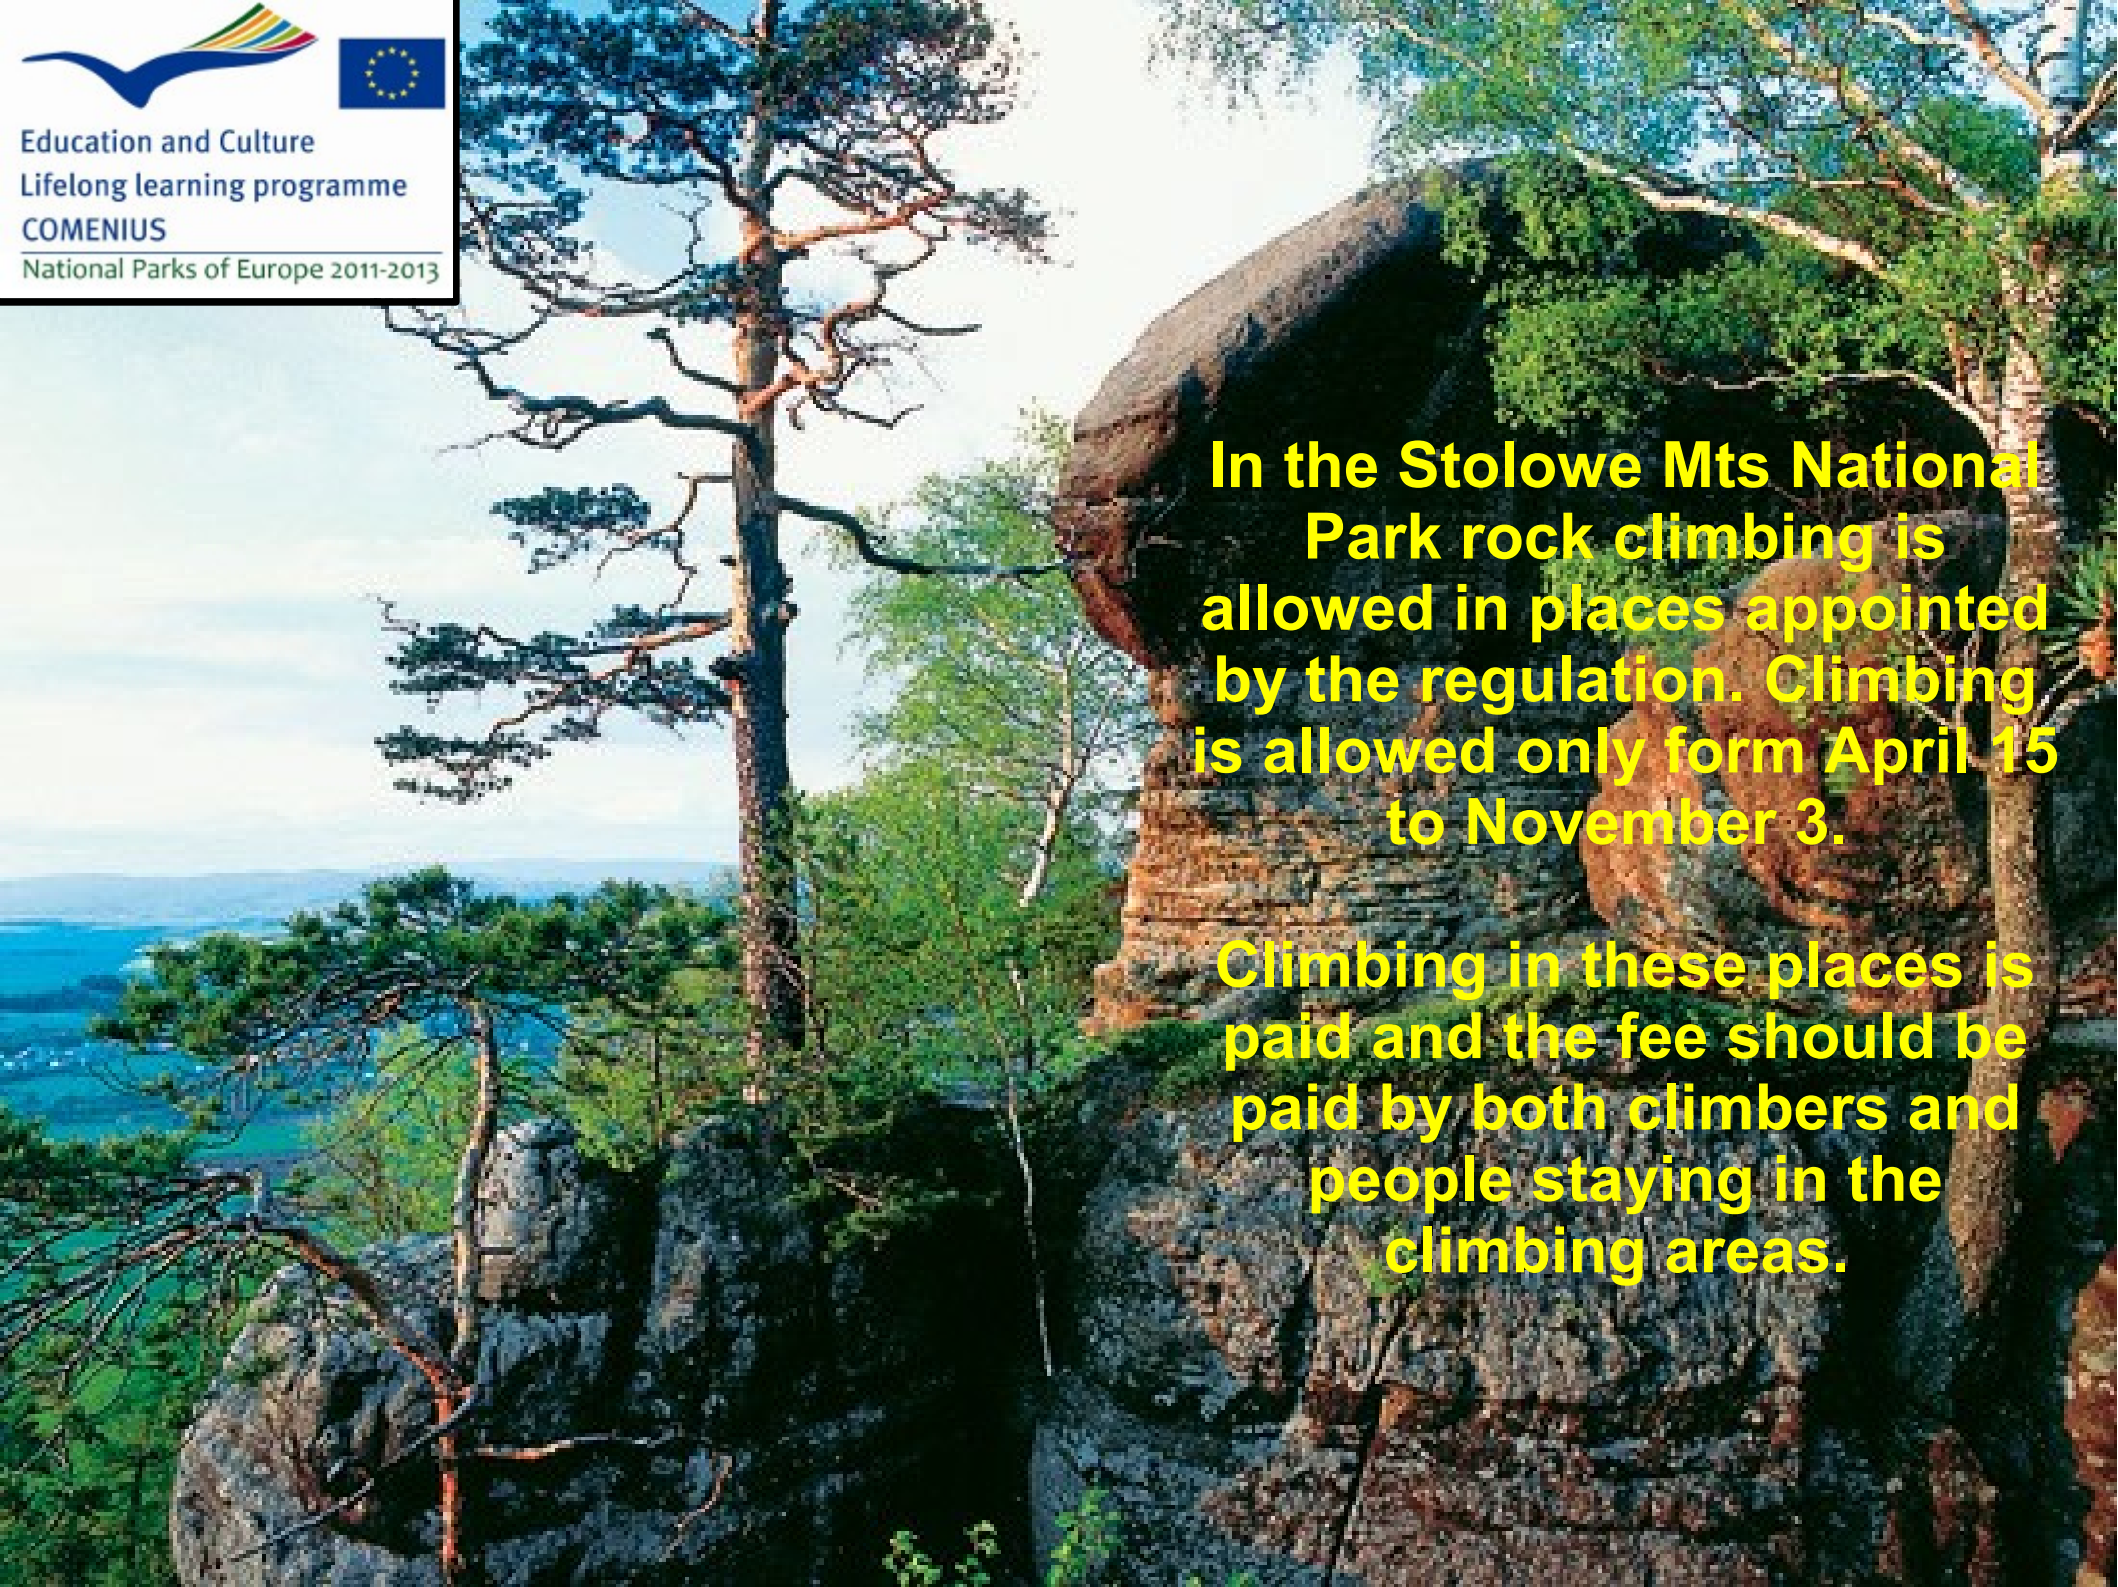

The movement of tourists here is mainly towards the landscapes, and concentrates on the region of the Errant Rocks and Szczeliniec Wielki. There are not many tourists on the rest of the trails, making them more attractive for hiking. Extraordinary rock formations such as mushrooms, rock columns or towers

Tourists preferring cycling may use bicycle routes which go through the Park and in its neighbourhood. The routes enable tourists to reach the most attractive parts of the Stolowe Mountains.

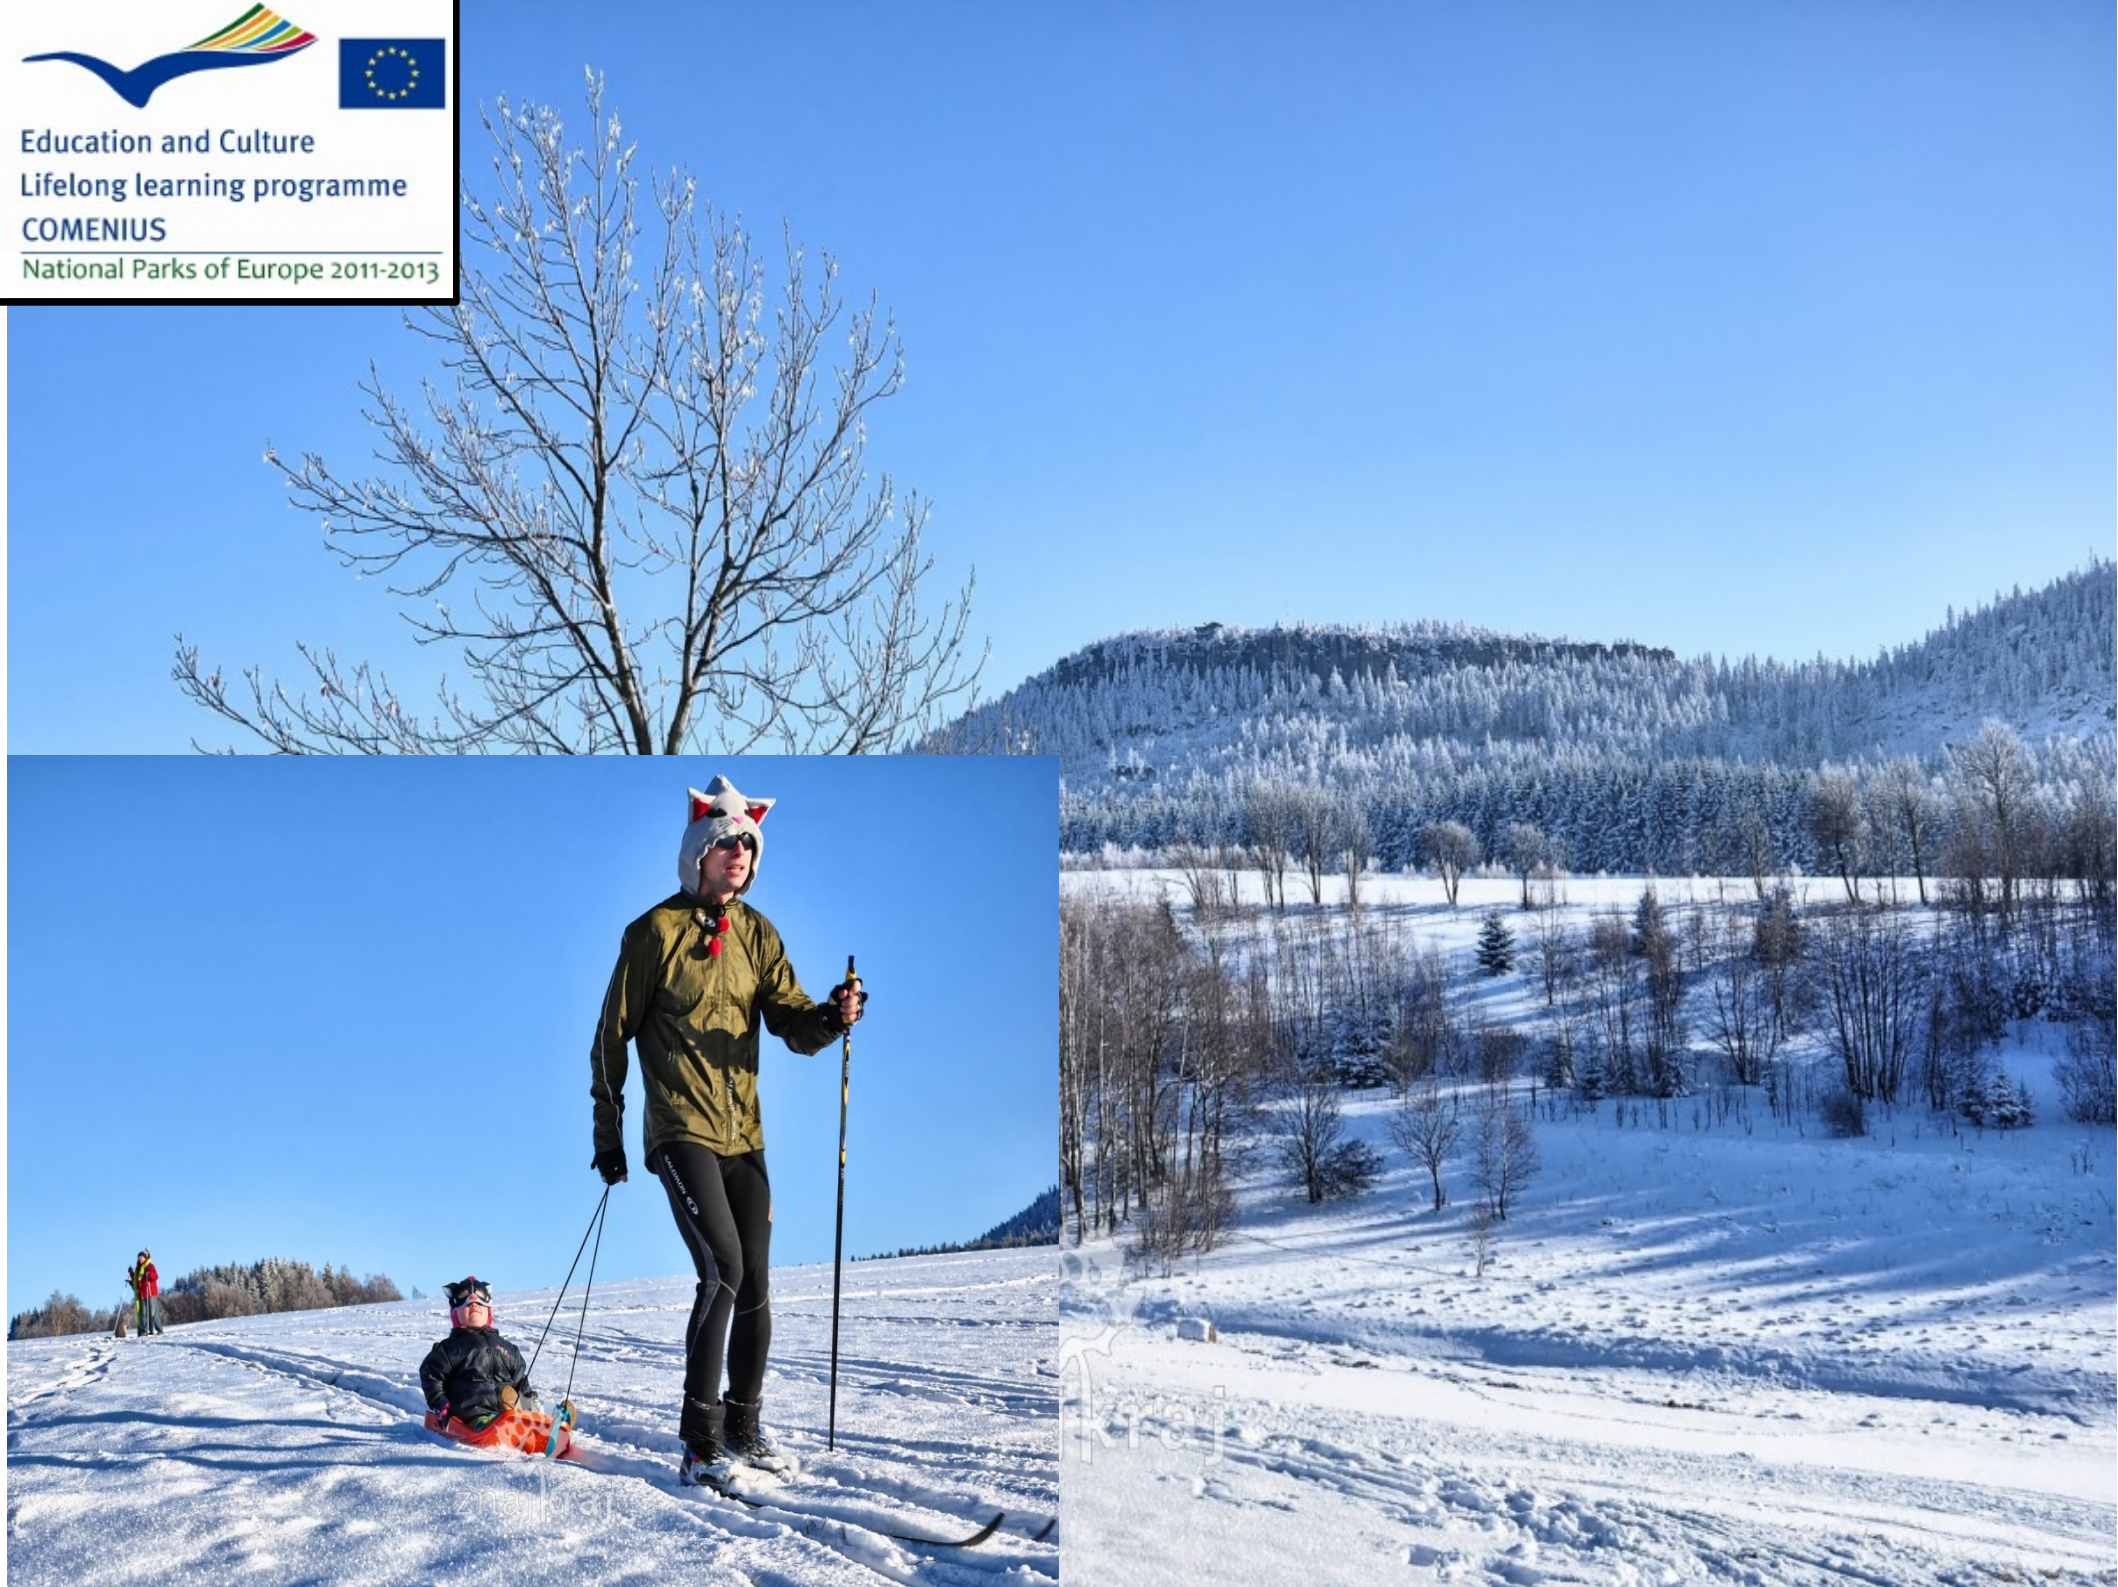

In the Stolowe Mts National Park rock climbing is allowed in places appointed by the regulation. Climbing is allowed only from April 15 to November 3.

Climbing in these places is paid and the fee should be paid by both climbers and people staying in the climbing areas.

In the area of Stolowe Mts NP in winter there also available skiing routes. The relief and picturesque landscapes only help to practise this sport. There are three main routes which are appointed in such a way that you can go around almost the whole park. The central point is in Karlow where there is a proper tourist base.

EDUCATION

The Centre in Stolowe Mountains was created on the 17th September 1996 and since then has been carrying on ecological education aiming at all social and age groups. The centre aims at propagating ecological education among the youngest and new teaching methods for schools, rising ecological awareness among people professionally dealing with tourism in the area of the park, getting local society acceptance for the National Park existence and making local society aware of the national Park's activities. All the aims are reached with the help of active and passive forms.

To passive form belong:

- Exhibitions and information outlets
- Publications
- Didactic routes

To active forms belong:

- Educational workshops for children and teenagers
- Teacher trainings
- Lectures and film sessions
- Cooperation in writing syllabus
- Professional guides training
- Laboratory classes
- Scientific symposia
- Ecological sessions
